

Wikis and EPortfolio

Wikis: The most popular online collaboration tool.

The term wiki comes from a Hawaiian bus "Wiki Wiki Shuttle." It was used, according to Wikipedia (the most famous wiki of them all), to avoid using the term "Quick Web."

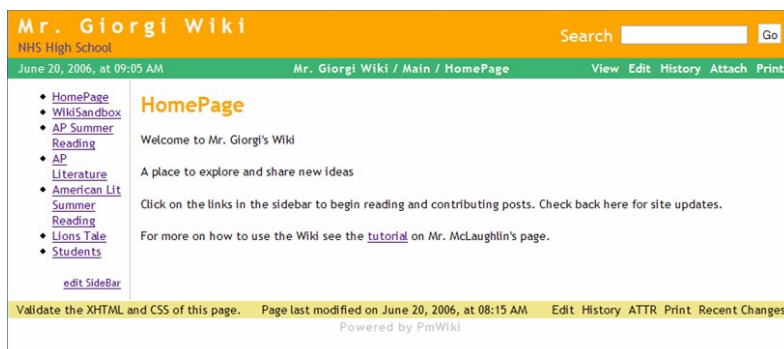

<http://www.nhsd.org/hs/HIGHSCHOOL/wiki/index.php> is where all the NHS Wikis are housed.

If you are interested in a wiki, please see Tom M.

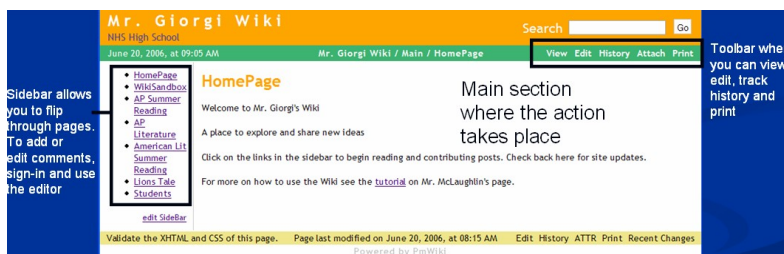

Mr. Giorgi Wiki

For this manual we will take a short tour of the Mr. Giorgi Wiki.

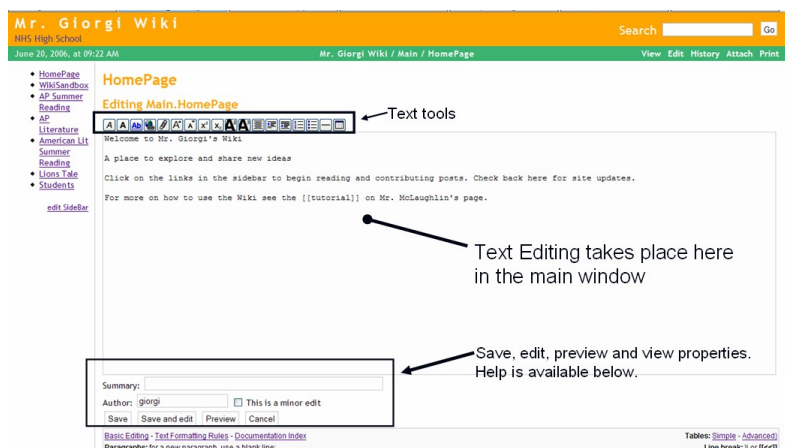

Anatomy of a wiki

The main parts of the wiki include a sidebar where you can see a list of pages in the wiki, a main section where the main articles are and the navigation menu in the upper right hand corner

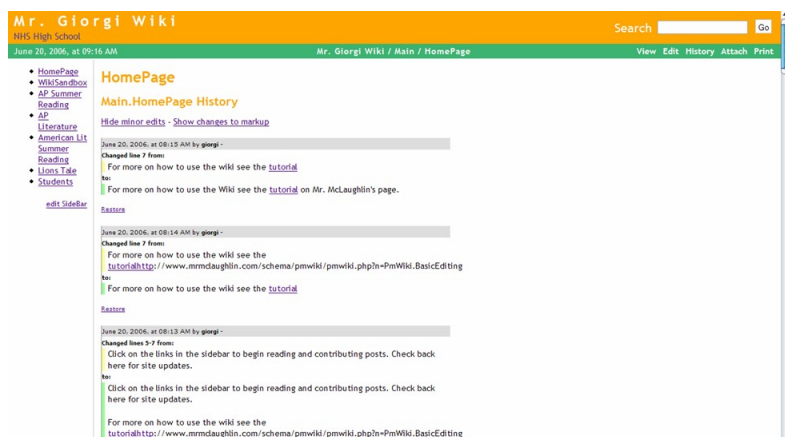

The Edit Window

The editing window offers you a familiar word processor-style interface that allows you to create your posts.

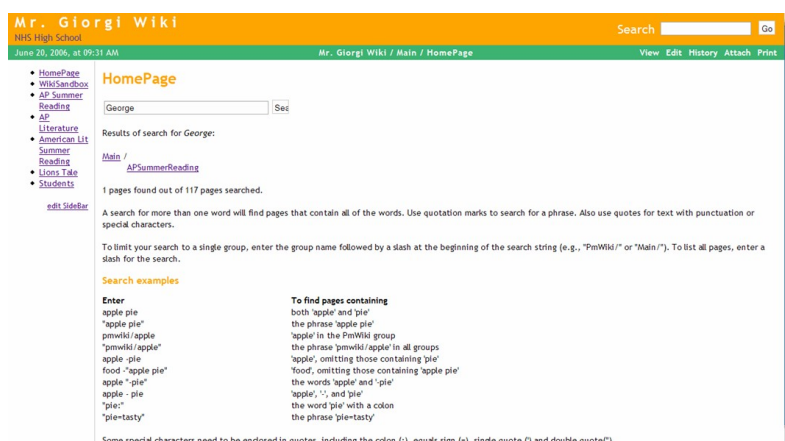

History View

Everything done in the wiki is recorded and time stamped. If anything happens or any post or change is made, the history page will record it. Even if something is deleted out of the wiki, you can still see it in the history page.

Search Page

Allows you to perform a text search in the wiki.

Print View

Printing any page will not overwhelm the printer with unnecessary graphics or colors.

EPortfolio: NHS Wiki in progress

A work in progress in 2007-2008 is a wiki system for NHS where students could house all of their best "portfolio" quality content in an EPortfolio online.
